HI FRIENDS!! I have only met your boss once – at a state think tank conference in OKC about 4 years ago – but my goodness am I honored to be talking with him tomorrow. Thank you all for all your help in making this happen.

One quick question – Clint let me know that we are not advertising ASP's involvement until tomorrow 5 am (for media) and not at all (everyone else) – I think I have that right. I completely understand the strategy there – but worry that we will have a very light attendance in the morning for his session from the registered attendees if they don't know he is a. going to be there and b. is first up.

Would it be ok if we let the attendees know today or tonight? The media attendance is also really light – and I think this will be a great opportunity for him to tell HIS story of transforming America (with some guidance from me) but they may completely miss it because he is so early in the program.

Again – please know we are so happy leaving as is – but I told Clint yesterday I would at least raise up my thoughts today.

Thanks so much!

Brooke

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Brooke Rollins, TPPF President and CEO, is very much looking forward to having the conversation with Administrator Pruitt on Thursday morning. The questions that have been edited by your team work great for us, and I have copied Brooke on this email in case there is anything you want to ask her or if there are any follow up questions Brooke has for you all.

Regards,

Clint Nesmith
Vice President of Engagement
Texas Public Policy Foundation
