Tom, I believe the facial hair situation can be divided into three considerations:

1. Law
2. Personnel Relations aspects, particularly non-exempt and salaried.
3. Cost

Law - Need definition of emergency use of respiratory equipment and who is involved.

Personnel Relations - What is reasoning behind requiring ALL personnel to get seal? What do we do with contractors such as telephone men, etc.?

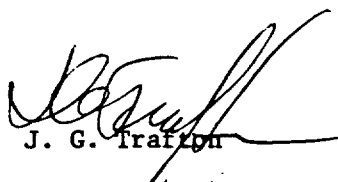

Cost - If you define emergency as something which could happen anywhere in the plant and therefore everyone must be able to get a seal, then it logically follows that:

- a) Everyone must be trained in the use of the mask.
- b) There must be a sufficient number of masks in the plant to cover any situation.
- c) The masks must be located to fulfill the need specified in b).
- d) Where more than one type of mask is required, you must be prepared to do a), b), and c) for all types of masks.
