

Bathroom Tiles

MINOR improvements around the house should be taken care of as soon as possible. If they are not, a small flaw in construction in a few years may develop into a serious and costly matter.

Take the question of the typical bathroom windowsill. Often it is located over the tub-shower space and has to withstand the effects of water and steam. If it is not surfaced with a waterproof material such as ceramic tile, the windowsill will deteriorate in a comparatively short time.

To prevent this, cover the window area with tiles of either a matching color or one that blends with the wall tile.

Sanding Tip

ALWAYS sand with the grain of the wood. Sanding across the grain makes scratches which require many more strokes to remove.
