Dear Dr. Kehoe:-

At a meeting of life underwriters, to be held in Atlantic City in May, I expect to give a short talk on the influence of lead poisoning on mortality. Off-hand, I can say that the evidence is that lead poisoning has little or no effect on life insurance morality experience, but the evidence is very meager and mostly of a negative character.

I shall greatly appreciate any suggestions you might care to make with respect to illuminating this question.

With best regards and hoping to see you at the A. M. A. meeting, if not before, I am

Sincerely yours,

A. J. Lanza, M.D.
