Dear Sir,

I am working on a study of lead-containing pesticides, and thought that you might be able to answer a few questions for me.

- 1) What lead compounds are being used as pesticides? What companies manufacture them?
- 2) What amounts of these compounds were used in 1970, and how does these amounts relate to those used in previous years?
- 3) In what areas are these compounds used, and against what pests?
- 4) How effective are these compounds, and what are the risks involved in their use?
- 5) Have other compounds been developed that could effectively replace the lead-containing compounds presently in use? If so, how safe are the non-lead compounds?

Since my study must be completed by late August, I would appreciate a reply at your earliest possible convenience.

Thank you for your efforts.

Sincerely yours,

Nancy Stocker
