Dear Sir:

I greatly appreciated your prompt reaction to my letter of November 1st on the subject of Dr. Ciessel, as well as that of Tom Shipman, a copy of which you will have received.

On my return from Cincinnati yesterday, I also found the note from Harriet Hardy of which a copy is herewith, and one from Red Johnstone saying "I would suspect the guy of being quite a businessman, as indicated by his brochure on lead." With these were the copy of Dr. Ciessel's letter to you and marked enclosure of which copies are in turn also herewith.

I don't want to be too hard on the lad, but, as the Bard of Avon would have put it, methinks he doth protest too much. Be that as it may, I am sure that neither your word of caution nor Tom's did any harm. It is not clear to me whether Harriet wrote in similar vein, or whether she was too spitting lead to do so.

I don't suppose that Dr. Ciessel is loving me too dearly at the moment, but that can hardly be helped.

Sincerely,

MB:GW
