adopted by the conference last week deal with problems that have been confronting the prune industry for a number of years.

Conference recommendations were announced Dean Hutchinson following a meeting in San Francisco. There were eight points, basis upon which a working committee was instructed to work out a program for the prune industry.

Dean Hutchinson said it is not possible to say at this time under which law or which of laws the drafting committee will be able to work out the program.

These were the ten recommendations:

1. That the Federal Government provide funds sufficient to grade subject to the act and to defray part of the cost of inspection to effect movement in interstate channels of off-grade prunes.

2. That the Federal Government provide funds sufficient to defray part of the cost of the administration of the act.

3. That adequate provision be made for needed research in connection.

4. That representatives of the growers and packers of prunes be given an opportunity to participate in the administration of any marketing program.

5. The program should be made operative as soon as possible.

6. That enforcement be a necessary essential part of any program.

8. The program should be made to conform with differences in conditions to meet changing conditions from year to year.

"CHEAP" PAINT

Dutch Boy Paint costs less than "cheap" paint because its quality ingredients wear longer and it makes repainting an easy, less expensive job. It wears down slowly and smoothly, leaving a surface that can be repainted without expensive preparation that increases labor costs.

"Cheap" paint, in contrast, breaks down rapidly and cracks and scales within a short time. Repainting is expensive because it is often necessary to scrape or burn off the old paint.

Dutch Boy Paint wears and wears without chipping, cracking or scaling. It is 99% film-forming oils and pigments and 1% turpentine and drier. This popular ready-mixed line carrying the Dutch Boy trade-mark wears longer and better, therefore costs less in use. Come to us for every paint need.
