THIS BOOKLET hereunto is sent at the request of a painter near you. You will find his name on the cover.

THIS painter asked us to talk plainly to you about paint. That naturally gives us confidence in him. You probably will feel the same way, for when a painter is anxious to lay the facts about paint before a prospective patron, it is pretty good proof that he means to play fair.

It will take only a few minutes to read the booklet. These few minutes may be the means of saving you many dollars on your painting bills—besides insuring you a satisfaction from the painting such as cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents.

If your property needs painting, inside or outside, now is not too soon to consider having the work done with good paint by a good painter. Delay means decay; decay means replacement. It is by far less costly to repaint now than to replace later on. "Save the workmen and you save all."

Very truly yours,
