Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC officers said the drop had been expected, however, since college officials ruled last June to make the program voluntary rather than compulsory for lower class men.

Li Col Keith Houlson, assistant professor of military science and chairman of the department, said that the Army ROTC has only 475 members so far this year, compared to 1,833 last year. Of this year's group, 124 are freshmen. Last year, the first year students numbered 1,000.

Similar drops in the lower division were reported by Navy and Air Force officers, however all three military branches said there were increases in the signups by juniors and seniors.

Houlson, commenting on the drop, said "there are a fine bunch of boys" enrolled in this year's program, adding that he was satisfied with the result of the departure from the compulsory enrollment.
