A Most of it. Probably about 85, 90 percent.

Q Now, could you explain for the ladies and gentlemen of the jury your educational background and training?

A Sure.

Well, after college I went to medical school in New York at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, and I graduated in 1975 with a Doctor of Medicine degree.

And then I went to Duke University Medical Center in Durham, North Carolina where I did an internship and residency in internal medicine and served as associate chief resident in internal medicine from 1975 to 1978.

Then I stayed on at Duke and did a fellowship in pulmonary medicine and finished that in 1979, and remained at Duke on the faculty after finishing my training.

Q And Duke is in North Carolina; is that correct?

A Yes.