I went several times over your " Houston Plant Mortality Study " and each time I enjoyed it more and more.

It is this kind of work that throws light into the real contribution of the medical profession in the struggle to keep safe and healthy all those working in the industry.

This study is a fine example of what can be done with the judicious application of medical knowledge to the specific situation created in each and every industrial microcosmos. The net result is a better health quality and longer life.
