My dear Dr. Kehoe:

I note you are certainly concentrating on the Akron case of extensor paralysis in the filling station attendant called to your attention a couple weeks ago. I can well imagine a case of poliomyelitis or any other paralysis involving the upper extremities in a filling station attendant might cause considerable misgivings as to the possible lead exposure, but I am truly surprised that in all of these years no similar case has ever been brought to the attention of this Department.

We should be glad to welcome any further intelligence you have on this case.

Very truly yours,

Emery R. Hayhurst
