Dear Dr. Givens:

It was good of you to write to me. It is not always the case that one's experience requires him to go slow in the interpretation of an unusual situation. It is even more unusual that a suggestion is followed through in such good faith. One is more often thought of as throwing his weight about, and so is disregarded.

It seems to me a bit strange that medical men so frequently feel that their authority is being questioned when a simple inquiry is made, and it is a real pleasure to find the reversed attitude.

Thanks again.

Cordially,

Robert A. Kehoe, M.D.

Occupational Medicine
