Vern,

Thanks. This is not good news. I've talked with Bob Orth about this and he's going to check with someone he knows at ORNL. Without doubt Anderson will use this as a marketing tool. I only hope the ORNL sorbent pad work is being done according to a strict protocol with verification and internal controls. Apparently ORNL can function as a contract lab; note that they've funded this project themselves. Likely, they hope to generate a larger project from this initial sorbent pad work. Someone should let CRI know about this.
