When the now famous cats of Paine's design were completed they were placed at the entrance of the Wood estate in full public view.

Paine spent a full year on the Paine property while working on the cats. He devised his own tools, first modeled the cats in clay and then painstakingly made molds from which sections were cast. Subtly tinted, the concrete sections were then assembled into the two statues, dwarfing man in size as shown in the above picture.
