THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS FACILITIES. ^{See} Spectrum

ODAY The Sherwin-Williams Co. own and operate five paint and varnish factories in the following cities: Cleveland, O., Chicago, Ill., Montreal, Can., London, Eng., and Newark, N. J. They have saleshouses and warehouses in all the large cities, with representatives to the number of 250, covering every part of the civilized world. Practically every town in the country with any population has a Sherwin-Williams agency and great care is taken to select the best stores available.

Manufacturing over six hundred distinct products requires enormous capital and facilities. The Sherwin-Williams Co. owns its own lead and zinc mines and smelters; controls practically all the sources of the raw materials used in the manufacture of its various products; makes its own boxes; makes its own tin cans; operates a large printing plant, where all its advertising matter which circulates over the entire world is printed; owns and operates its own linseed oil mills, which have attained a reputation everywhere for the quality and purity of their linseed oil; and numerous other branches which help to

Spectrum make up the largest paint and varnish system in the world.

Sherwin-Williams Products for architects have been mentioned in THE SPECTRUM for several years and their use on the Hudson Terminal buildings and similar structures is ample tribute to their quality and superiority.
