Q. If you will turn over to the second page in regard to the listing of the directors, does it also indicate that Mr. Harold Boeschenstein, the gentleman that we were referring to earlier, was a director for Owens-Illinois during the year 1941?

A. His name is listed under directors.

Q. If you will turn to the third page, sir, does that document also reflect that during the year 1941, that Owens-Illinois had an ownership interest in Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Thank you, sir.

Mr. Schillaci, I'd like to hand you another document, sir.

A. I have read it.

MR. MADEKSHO: Tom?

THE VIDEO TECHNICIAN: We're still on the record, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Madeksho) Mr. Schillaci, this is a document dated January 7, 1942, and I believe it is written by -- it has the initials ECA, and I think other evidence in the case will show that that stands for Ed C. Ames. And it is a letter sent to Mr. E. J. Marshall, I believe, who was an attorney there in Toledo, with a carbon copy of the letter going to Mr. Harold Boeschenstein. Is that correct?

A. That's what this document indicates, yes.

Q. And I think that we have just established that Mr. Harold Boeschenstein was a director for the Owens-Illinois Corporation. And the subject being the asbestos workers union; is that correct?

A. That is mentioned in the document, yes, sir.

Q. And, if you would, go down to about the middle of the page with me, if you would, where it talks about the strategy for 1942. And see if I read this correctly and then I've got a couple of questions I need to ask you about it.

It says: "Should it not be to take the offensive, the following plan is suggested: Gather as a weapon in reserve an impressive file of photostats of medical literature on asbestosis. Available are two bibliographies covering medical literature to 1938, citing references to scores of publications in which the
