Bill: Thanks again for participating last week in EEI's environmental committee meetings. Based on the extensive feedback I've received subsequently from my staff and numerous company officials, your remarks and the ensuing discussion were extremely well received. I'm sorry that I wasn't able to be there, but—and I think this may have come up in passing the last time you and I chatted in person—my wife has been very ill the past couple of years and had to have emergency surgery last week.

Anyway, I am hoping to get on your calendar to both provide some additional insights on major issues of mutual interest and to explore opportunities to further enhance the constructive relationship that exists between EEI and your team. Recognizing that the holiday season is upon us, but also that the relative quiet of late December potentially affords some quality down time, do you have a small window sometime over the next couple of weeks? Let me know. Cheers, Quin
