actually had four pages, and it listed a whole bunch of different studies. I think it had 23. And on this chart, Dr. Weir included a lot of different tests and studies.

In fact, he told you he included every test and study that he could find.

Some of the tests and studies talk about fiber release on a personal level, and they are under the personal monitoring section; some talked about it under area monitoring, and they are under the monitoring section; and some talked about the chemical contest of the brake materials that were tested.

He put all of those on the chart because he felt that they were useful in explaining exactly what is going on when we are talking about exposure levels.

You may recall during cross-examination by the plaintiffs' experts, they didn't want to talk about this whole chart.

No. What they wanted to talk about were two or three little studies that he included on the chart,
