I would talk to Russ and learn what is being discussed or decided on Monday. It's probably not worth taking the red eye over. Just connect with Russ when you arrive Monday evening to get a running Tuesday

Subject: FW: Shanghai Health Study - June meeting

Zach,

Per our previous discussions, it seems to me that the "budget and contract issues" have historically been an issue (of some debate) on this project. I called Russ and indicated that I plan to attend on 6/24, and that I am not comfortable missing part of the meeting on Monday afternoon (I may attend Monday by conference call, and fly out that evening on the red eye, so that I don't miss the discussion). I'm supposed to attend a wedding in Tahoe on Sunday, or I would just fly out to be there on Monday.

Russ indicated that, at this point, there seems to be a question re. how many attendees will be able to attend a Monday afternoon pre-meeting, but he said he would keep me posted.

Your thoughts?

Thanks,

Eric

Eric and Alex,

As you know the sponsors of the Shanghai Health Study are planning to meet at API on June 24 (Tuesday). However if we could start Monday afternoon, it would facilitate getting through a very full agenda. I know it is very difficult for you to get to downtown Washington before 4 PM, so I want to; 1) confirm that you plan to attend in person or will you call-in?, and 2) do you mind if the others start on Monday afternoon and grind through some of the budget and contract issues? We would leave any issues that require a vote or creative thinking until Tuesday.

Let me know what you plans are and we will continue to refine the agenda.

Regards,

Russell White
