At the recent PCB workshop in conjunction with the Company wide Environmental Workshop, several plant representatives said they had received no information as yet regarding 1) the inadvertent PCB generation rule, and 2) the heat transfer/hydraulic system rule requiring use of Viton® gloves, etc.

I did transmit this information to the Environmental Control managers in early August (copy attached); however, it never filtered down to the plant supervisor level in all cases.

Would you please see that copies of this information are sent to your respective plant sites?

In addition, I suggest we discuss an appropriate manner for transmitting future information to insure it gets to the plant level. Perhaps a future ECC meeting would be appropriate for such a discussion.
