ONE YEAR AGO

Last year I was deeply touched at the warmth and cordiality with which you all greeted the young James W. Byrnes Shellac Company at its first convention.

During the past year, the sincerity of these friendly greetings has been translated into a cooperation and good-will that is largely responsible for the present leadership of this company in the importation, manufacture and sale of Shellac in all its forms.

I am proud to have this opportunity of thanking you all . . . individually and collectively . . . for your share in this year of pleasant prosperity.

Yesterday,
the Pithecanthropus

roamed the fields,
where golfers now disport

THE Pithecanthropus, or ape man, possessed a brain nearer in weight to a full-grown baboon than to the ape brain. Unlike the apes, he walked erect. Discovered in 1907, along with the bones of the unknown extinct men. The fossil he used to roam now had gutters for his long feet and over the grassy slopes. Such is progress. The gull gets his feet on the sidewalk to produce golf balls, while golf shoes. In step with the march of progress is The Pennsylvania Sugar Company, the Quaker Brand Industrial Alcohol, much used in these and other great industries.
