

Caution: This email originated from outside EPA, please exercise additional caution when deciding whether to open attachments or click on provided links.

Alex,

My name is Ryan Ullman and I am VP of Government Relations and Political Affairs for the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA). I believe you may know my colleague Lee Fuller and are familiar with our organization.

I've also added Chris Kearney to this email. Chris represents a handful of oil and gas trade associations that would help inform any conversation on air issues in the oil and gas industry.

At your convenience, Chris and I would like to discuss setting up a virtual meeting with roughly 10 state and federal oil and gas associations to discuss how sound energy policy and environmental stewardship can be accomplished.

If you're so inclined, you can review the transition document we have been circulating since last November here: <https://www.ipaa.org/wp-content/uploads/2024/11/2024-IPAA-Transition-Issue-Packet.pdf>

Additionally, here is a sample of the resources we have produced through our Energy In Depth program that demonstrate the ongoing commitment and success American energy producers have had with respect to lowering emissions associated with E&P activities.

Methane Emissions Decline in Top Oil and Gas Basins \(2019-2023\)

Please feel free to contact me with any questions or openings in your schedule to have a preliminary discussion with us regarding this request. My cell number is Ex. 6 Personal Privacy (PP)

Sincerely,
Ryan Ullman
VP Government Relations & Political Affairs
Independent Petroleum Association of America