SECRET

Toxics Committee

A. Short Range

Within eight weeks (by December 15) develop model legislation that will result in reducing, to the maximum extent feasible, the amount of heavy metals such as lead, cadmium and mercury in packaging that is manufactured or sold in the Northeastern states. The legislation should mandate that in the manufacture of packaging, no heavy metals may be added in inks, dyes, pigments, adhesives or other additives. The model legislation should be in a form that may be adapted easily to each state's legislative style. The findings, or expository section, should indicate that the proposed legislation is a first step toward solving the problem of reducing the toxicity of packaging waste.

B. Long Range

1. Provide technical assistance to businesses/industries to aid them in making their packaging toxics - free.
2. Monitor the progress of the model legislation in each state's legislature. Provide information on the legislation, upon request.
3. Investigate the need to add other materials to the list proposed in the model legislation.
4. Investigate other methods to reduce toxics in the solid waste stream.

DRAFT

Packaging Standards Committee

Overall goal is to eliminate to the extent possible packaging as a waste product. This is accomplished through elimination/reduction of the package or by making it returnable or refillable.

TASK:

1. Define government's, industry's and the public's role in implementing preferred packaging.
2. Define reduction and ratio of materials and type of materials used in packaging to product amount.
3. Categorize packaging materials by product category.
4. Set numerical values for recyclability and recycled content by category of materials used.

Education Committee

The education committee is responsible for developing proposals to the Board of Directors to educate the public and public decision-makers about the importance and need for source reduction as a waste management option and to encourage environmentally sound consumer decisions.

The officers of the Steering Committee are responsible for communicating to the general public about the existence and activities of CONEG.
