House Natural Resource Chairman Rob Bishop's 2018 reelection campaign will be his last, a committee spokeswoman said today.

Bishop first made the announcement that he would leave after 2020 at a Friday town hall in Utah, which was first reported by the Associated Press.

The eight-term Utah Republican is well known for sporting three-piece suits and has chaired the committee since 2015, championing efforts to hand more public lands over to states.
