"The best flatting medium we have ever used"

—say the painters who recently decorated this Louisiana court house

A BEAUTIFUL painting job has just been finished at Opelousas, La. The interiors of stately old St. Landry Parish Court House, built in 1886, were redecorated by Schwartzburg and Fisher, a prominent firm of local painters. For this important contract, where both beauty and serviceability were demanded, these painters used paint made of Dutch Boy white-lead and Dutch Boy flatting oil.

"Dutch Boy flatting oil is without doubt the best flatting medium we have ever used," say these painters. "It makes, with white-lead, a flat paint that brushes out smoothly, dries slowly, and covers more surface per gallon."

For beautiful interiors

Reports such as this come to us from every section of the country. Painters everywhere are achieving new beauties in interior work through the use of Dutch Boy flatting oil with white-lead. As a result they are building greater reputations and getting new contracts.

Dutch Boy flatting oil is complete in itself. Just mix it into the white-lead. Add no driers, turpentine or linseed oil. Any good painter can achieve beautiful effects with this remarkable flatting medium.

Our new booklet "Wall Effects of Distinction for the Home" describes some of the individual wall finishes you can now get with Dutch Boy white-lead and flatting oil. If you haven't already received a copy, write our nearest branch for one.
