II. HEALTH AND SAFETY IN THE WORKPLACE

Westinghouse recognizes its responsibility to provide employes a safe and healthful workplace and proper facilities to help the employes do the job effectively.

It is the policy of Westinghouse to:

- Provide safe and healthful working environments and to reduce occupational injuries and illness.

- Install and maintain all facilities and equipment in accordance with recognized and accepted standards essential to the protection of employes.

- Reduce to the extent reasonably possible, the use of materials, procedures or processes that expose employes to substances that are potentially toxic, flammable or radioactive or to other potentially hazardous conditions.

- Provide not only the employe medical services required by law but also additional medical services that are consistent with circumstances of each organizational unit, reflect good medical practice, and that may reasonably be expected to benefit the employe and Westinghouse.

- Assure compliance by all locations with both the spirit and intent of national, international, state and local legislation and governmental regulations providing for occupational health and safety.
