Dear Harriet:

I have just returned to my desk after a brief vacation in a warmer climate, and there are many things that have to be done all at once. I shall have to have some time at my disposal when I undertake to answer your letter, and I must also ask you, therefore, to be patient with the delay that will enable me to get the most pressing things behind me. I can see that my earlier letter requires both documentation and elucidation - the latter since I failed to state the case clearly in some respects.

I shall get around to a reply as soon as I can. Meanwhile I offer my best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,

RAK:vr
