I believe I even got a letter from you saying what I just said.

Is that a misunderstanding on my part?

MR. WILLIAMS: No, Your Honor, that is correct. The first --

THE COURT: Then that is a misrepresentation which I am not too thrilled with. Explain that to me, please.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, the first telephone conference which Ford did participate in -- we didn't participate in the second one, so I can't speak to what happened there -- we took up the issue.

As I recall, Mr. Smith renewed his request for Ford or for everybody to provide brake parts similar to those used by Mr. Grewe, and at that time I represented a couple of things to Your Honor.

The first was that Ford never manufactured the parts; I think that is in my letter.

The second representation that I made to you was that because Ford no longer installs asbestos-containing brake parts on light trucks and standard
