Dear Sir:

Every so often we come into possession of a scarce and early volume containing important contributions to science and industry, the cost of which would be disproportionately high to our clients in view of the fact that they would be interested only in individual chapters on their particular field.

In such instance we excerpt the item and offer same at a nominal charge, which includes the cost of our service and research.

We are therefore pleased to offer from "The Repertory of Arts and Manufacturers" three excerpts in connection with Patents granted for the making of White Lead used in Paint, at price of $10.00.

We hope that you will decide to retain same.

Very truly yours,

AMERICAN LIBRARY SERVICE

Confirming our conversation, the American Library Service have sent us three excerpts from an old book published about a hundred years ago entitled "The Repertory of Arts and Manufacturers". These excerpts cover the methods of manufacture and patents for making white lead, dated 1787, 1786, and 1797. They offer these excerpts for $10.

This is valuable information which we should have for our Historical collection, and I wish to purchase them. I therefore attach the original letter from the American Library Service and a cash voucher for $10.
