I spoke with Richard Mann, HSE Director for SIOP, last Thursday in London about this effort. He acknowledged that he was aware of the proposal and his "staff" is looking into it. He admits that he has several questions, like, is China interested in us coming in to do this study? etc. I think he is just not knowledgeable enough to judge at this time. He is critical to Oil Products participation in my view.

An example of funds being allocated from the API benzene task group for the Shanghai study.

Patsy,

FYI. A copy of my note back to George Woodall at API regarding the latest funding need for the China benzene project. As I mention in my comments to him the API "seed money" is going fast. There's not much left to put out the next fire that springs up.

Regards.

George,

Sorry I didn't get back to you on this yesterday. I support going ahead, but as I opined during the last call the big money crunch is coming and it looks like it will be sooner rather than later. I don't have a vote in what the consortium does, since I still can't get the Alliance on board, but they're going to have to think about some real money pretty soon.

My availability for a conference call is indicated if we go that route.
