OXFORD, England (UPI)—Authorities at Somerville College ordered coeds today to leave their thigh-high skirts in the closet during final exams so they won't hamper the concentration of male students.

Dean Mary Proudfoot issued the ban on high hemlines.

"Short or mini-skirts can look very attractive when a girl is standing up," Mrs. Proudfoot said, "but as soon as she sits down, they have a habit of riding up almost to the waist.

"It is not fair to the men students.

"You could hardly blame a man from letting his eyes wander in such a situation, and if his eyes wander, his concentration goes, he is liable to fail his exam."

Any girl who arrives at the examination room in a skirt above the knee will be told to go home and change, the 42-year-old dean said.
