

which prevail throughout the world, conditions of change, of and of fear exert an influence on all of us. The record of days, as of many other people in history, will be a record of permanence and pessimism." The story of home building, continued, is based on permanence rather than change and on endurance instead of fear. "We of us concerned with this activity know that home construction is a more worthwhile effort than home destruction," he said. "We know that the stability, and security of
