Subject: POLITICO's Women Rule Summit begins

At a moment of far-reaching change in politics and policy, women are more politically engaged than ever before - and yet remain vastly under-represented at every level of local, state, national and corporate decision-making.

At this year's Women Rule Summit, POLITICO is bringing together female leaders from the public and private sectors for a frank and forward-looking discussion about what it will take for women to finally break through.

Who are the women shaping our future - and what are their agendas? Where can women find common ground at a time of division? How are women taking their place at the table in the public and private sectors - and what difference can they make there?
