Good for you for also managing a little of your work-life balance.

No objections to your husband going along to California. I have assumed that his flight and meals etc will generally be covered personally and not by Shell. Let me know though if I am wrong in his assumption..

kind regards,
Elizabeth

Bet you lunch that my keyboard clunkiness is much worse than yours. My strange key strokes create situations that even the Help Desk does not recognize.

Got lots going on with the China Study now. CEOs of sponsoring companies are deciding this week whether to continue sponsorship, i.e. pay more money than original commitment. This could mean an additional 1-1.2MM for Shell over the next 4 years. Got a meeting of the consortium here at Shell Aug 19-20. Volunteered to host verses paying for a trip to DC. Aromatics is paying for continental breakfast and lunch. The study first annual meeting is in California the last week of August. I would like to take my husband along and tack on some vacation days on either end, if that is okay with you. Susan said that we should ask before we do that. My room at the meeting site is the same price with one or two occupants. I would only charge the rental car to Shell for the actual days of the meeting.

Regards,

Patsy

Thanks Patsy - yes realised after I hit the send - oh well.... I'll likely have clumsy fingers (and brain for awhile).

Slowly ploughing through e-mail and snail mail. The reward for being away so long. How are things with you?
