Gentlemen:

My father has been working for the State of Utah collecting samples of gasoline for the past eight years. Ethyl gasoline is one of the products that he picks up at the pumps.

He has suddenly become very ill, and it appears that most of the muscles have disappeared from his back and arms. We have taken him to a very fine doctor who diagnosed it as lead poisoning.

In your many years of handling Ethyl products, we thought that you must have had lots of experience with this trouble; and since father isn't responding very quickly to treatment, "he is seventy-one years old," we wonder if you could give us any advise on the best way of treating this illness. We would turn the material over to our doctor.

This is urgent, and we would appreciate a reply by airmail. If you would cooperate with us in this matter, we would greatly appreciate it.

Very truly yours,

Royal L. [REDACTED]
