Hello,

I am a freelance journalist who has been trying to get some information from EPA for awhile now. I was communicating with StClair, Christie <StClair.Christie@epa.gov> but she has not responded to me since June 21st.

I tried emailing her again today but I received an automated message stating she is out of the office.

It's been over 1.5 months that I have been trying to get some basic information.

Here is my original query:

"My name is Evan Henningsen, I'm a freelance writer in St. Louis and I'm conducting a story in co2 emissions from cars when they stop and go from stop signs.

More specifically my story details the overuse of stop signs in some cities and how this may negatively impact the environment.

I'm looking for professional information on this subject and I would like to be able to conduct a short phone interview with someone at the EPA. Would this be possible?

Thank you,"

I am asking again that I please be put in contact with someone who can aid me with my questions.

Thank you.
