Dear Bob:

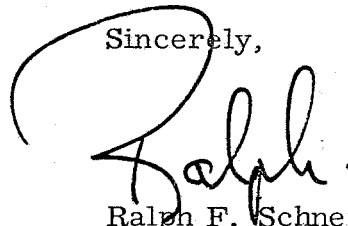

I greatly appreciate the amount of time and effort you have expended in reviewing the translation of the Japanese paper on petroleum tank cleaning.

One of the main reasons why I wanted you to review this was that I also had grave doubts about the advisability of publishing this translation. I agree with you completely that publication might very well raise more questions than answers and in some areas could actually be misleading to our physicians. Therefore, it will not be published.

I know how busy you are, and I hesitate to presume on your good nature and cooperation, but I am sure an article on this subject for the Medical Bulletin would be most valuable, and I would be perfectly willing to wait whatever length of time is necessary for this.

Thank you again for your invaluable advice and kind cooperation.

Sincerely,

Ralph F. Schneider, M. D.
