Q Could you just briefly describe what type of publication it was and what it discussed?

A Well, it is a textbook, and it is published in the United States. It deals with -- it is called Safety.

There is a chapter in it that deals with industrial hygiene and in it is -- really the modern practice of industrial hygiene, certainly we have learned a lot more and how to sample things better, but the basic principles of industrial hygiene in terms of how you identify hazards, how you actually do some measurement of hazards and then how you control hazards is all described in there.

We have just elaborated on them as time has gone on.

Q Could you tell us --

MR. IGNATOWSKI: Your Honor, should I continue?

THE COURT: Go ahead.
