Dear Bob:

I read yours of the 5th with much interest. The suggestions are thoroly worth while and in our more affluent days JIH would have had a go at the papers I returned and more like them. The only way I can see to get them into print is to pay the publishing costs and to tell the editors of the Journals you select exactly what you told me. We'd lean over backwards to help but we simply haven't the cash to take anything other than the sort of paper we are supposed to take.

Would it not be possible to publish them in abstract form with foot-note to the effect that the full paper is on file at such and such a place. For such filing we are beginning to use that new Bureau at Washington which will keep them for authors and send small photos to interested inquirers at small cost. I

Much the same sort of thing is done routinely at the US Patent Office.

Our publishing costs are about \$7.50 per page and it takes about $2\frac{1}{2}$ double spaced pages to equal one Journal page.

Don't consider that we have turned you down. I don't mind papers that happen to have negative or non-spectacular results. Sometimes negative results are all important.

Why not have a go at Fishbein? After all he is an experienced editor and he runs a flourishing business whatever anyone thinks of his politics. I have a great respect for his judgement and common sense in a matter such as this. Compared to our small show the AMA positively stinks with $'s.
