29th October, 1973.

Dear Mr. Cole,

Thank you so much for your letter of the 23rd October, concerning my manuscript on poisons. It arrived on the morning that I was to hand in the entire manuscript so I had just enough time to make amendments. I greatly appreciate the work you have done for me and I have made all the modifications and deletions that you recommend. In fact I had already trimmed down some of my more dramatic phrases so that I now feel confident of the balance of this section.

I have expressed my appreciation of your co-operation at the beginning of my book. (If this is not to your liking I quite understand and will omit it!) but I cannot tell you what a pleasing conclusion to all my work your letter made. Once again my thanks for all the effort you have made and extent to which you have criticised my article and thereby helped me.

Yours sincerely

Pauline A. Littlewood
