Dear Doctor Kehoe:

Your letter of April 4th. reached me at the beginning of a mean attack of influenza and, for some time, I was indifferent to the condition of my right hand and everything else.

The trouble with this hand started about two years ago with the loss of the sense of touch in the index finger. At first, the trouble would move to other fingers on the right hand and, finally, all of the fingers of the right hand were effected.

I have not lost the use of the hand except from stiffness on account of lack of exercise. No pain at all.

My doctor was unable to determine the trouble and advised soaking it in hot water for twenty minutes, every two hours.

I kept this up for a month and could see no change.

For the past two weeks, I notice an improvement.

I quit using Ethyl gasoline in my cigar lighter.

This may or; may not have effected the improvement.

I appreciate very much the interest you have shown in this and my delay in answering your letter was caused by the fact that I felt too badly to write a decent letter on any subject.

Yours very truly,

Wm. F. Little
