CHEST X-RAYS

There are sites that take and develop chest x-rays as a part of the periodic and preplacement physical examination. Quality control is a common concern and may be a problem at some locations.

Corporate Medical Division is planning a brief training course in x-ray quality control for nurses or others who are routinely taking x-rays, and who are not trained x-ray technicians.

Training would be conducted by Photo Products Department experts at Chestnut Run and include practical experience in the Corporate Medical Office in Wilmington.

At this time we would like to know who takes your x-rays (nurse or registered technician) and your interest in having your nurse participate in this training program.

Please complete the brief questionnaire and return it to John C. Bonnett, M.D., Medical Division, 11400 Nemours Building, Wilmington.
