Finance Committee and as a member of GM's ten policy groups: Energy; Industrial Relations; Marketing; Materials Management; Overseas; Personnel Administration and Development; Product; Public Relations; Research; and Service.

The bond between McDonald and GM goes back many years. Born in 1922 in Saginaw, Michigan (site of GM's central foundry), McDonald joined the corporation eighteen years later as a co-op engineering student at General Motors Institute (GMI), alternating school and work assignments.

A 1944 graduate of GMI, McDonald spent his senior year in the Navy V12 program at Yale University, after which he was an engineering officer in the submarine service. Discharged from the Navy in January, 1946 with the rank of lieutenant, junior grade, McDonald returned to the Saginaw Malleable Iron Plant (now GM's central foundry) and served in various engineering, sales, production, control and manufacturing positions.

Various assignments and promotions at the Central Foundry Division, Detroit Transmission Division, Pontiac Motor Division and the Chevrolet Motor Division led to McDonald's promotion to Executive Vice President and his election to the Board of Directors in 1974. As an executive vice president, he had jurisdiction over GM's Car and Truck Group, Body and Assembly Group, Electrical Components Group and Mechanical Components Group.

By 1978, McDonald also assumed overall responsibilities for the Power Products Group. He was elected to the Finance Committee in 1979, and in 1980 assumed responsibility for the Overseas Group.
