Hi Josh,

EPA's Burnwise website includes information for consumers, including information on choosing wood-burning appliances and best burn practices.

Just to be clear, the EPA stove program has no public information to provide on the topic?

I'm also writing an article about the issue and would need to mention this.

Thanks,

Josh

Thank you for reaching out with this opportunity, Josh. Unfortunately, we cannot participate at this time.

Please keep us in mind, in the future.

Thank you,
Enesta

Dec. 1 would be perfect. Around 750 words is what we're looking for. No other requirements, just anything you feel is important for people to know about EPA wood stoves.

Thanks,

Sounds good.

And when would need to submit the actual submission? Word max? Any other requirements?

Thanks, Josh.

Yes, exactly.

I'm hoping to know by the end of next week so I can be sure to have something together for the winter issue which will go out in the middle of December.

Thanks,

Josh

Hi Josh, thanks for reaching out. Are you speaking about EPA's wood stoves effort? If so, when do you need to hear back from us on whether we will make a submission? It would be an editorial from us, right?

Ms. Jones,

My name is Josh Schlossberg, I'm editor of The Biomass Monitor an online, subscription-based publication focused on the pros and cons of bioenergy. Our winter issue is focused on EPA stoves and we'd like to run an opinion piece from the EPA on the topic. Is there anything you can provide us that talks about the benefits?

Thanks,

Josh Schlossberg
