

Vallejo Times Herald - September 12, 1964 - page 2

until Godula's release. Under the law he could serve up to 10 years for his till tapping.

Godula had every intention of repaying the money after he had invested it and reaped the profits. Most of the money was to be used for shares in the Pittsburgh Pirates, a ball club for which he once worked as a scout and bat-boy.

After the proceedings were concluded Godula was returned to the California Medical Facility where he is now receiving psychiatric therapy.

The hostess also presented the sailors with a scroll, citing them for their propensity for making "social events more sociable," and it was remarked that ship forewell parties have become a part of the dim past in Vallejo.
