The summary-digest of State water laws is in two parts. The first part traces the development of state water laws, the organizational structure of State water and water law agencies, and has chapters covering laws relating to surface and ground waters. It explores the legal aspects of navigable and nonnavigable waters, weather modification, interstate water rights, and Federal and Indian reserved water rights.

Part II contains 50 chapters, each describing in detail the water laws of a single state.

According to Philip M. Glick, legal counsel for the Commission, the study clarifies information essential to water management, and will be useful not only to water lawyers but to legislators and administrators concerned about water programs and policies.

Dewsnup, an attorney in Salt Lake City, Utah, was with the Commission from 1970 until 1972; Jensen is an assistant attorney general for the State of Utah; and Swenson is professor of law at the University of Utah. The editors were assisted by Gary L. Greer of the Commission's legal staff.

Cost of the report is $4.55 if mailed, or $4.00 at the Government Printing Office bookstores.
