Contrasting with the stiff forms of Dutch hyacinths generally used for bedding are those hyacinths that bear loose flower spikes—of small, neat bells—the Roman and such miniatures. And effective flowers they are, scattered through perennial borders and under shrubbery and combined with narcissi and violets.

Now that real Dutch hyacinths are on the market again, every gardener should reserve a space for at least fifty

New Process Can Fuse Metal Without Heat

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. (U.P.)—Science marked up another score yesterday in the development of a new welding process—a technique that permits pieces of metal to be fused without the use of heat, electricity or chemicals

The process, developed by British scientists, has been brought to the United States by William DuBilier, who already has won world-wide fame for his work in the development of the electric condenser, an achievement that has enabled man to have fast communication and cheap radio and television sets.

Sometimes these blooms are banded with broad lines of deeper tints. As cut flowers, the blossoms last for days, especially if they are floated in flat arrangements.

Perhaps one of the main reasons why some people do not succeed with clematis is because they fail to provide the right type of soil. They must have a well-limed, sweet soil. This is an easy matter

Before inserting the plants in the fall, work in the ground lime at the rate of three spadeful to a yard of soil. Just before the rainy season, scatter ground lime over the roots of established vines, or work it in the water well but do not disturb the fibrous roots

Plant in a light, porous, well-drained soil. Set the plant several inches deeper than its sprouts at the base. Allow the vines to ramble in the sunshine but keep their ly in the fall, or one may plant the vines that come in tin cans any time. Open the soil and lime it well. Work in strasy manure and loam with lime. Then by winter the spot is ready to receive the plant. Give it a supporting stake at the same time, as it will start to grow at once.

As clematis is long-lived, the finer varieties will give the greatest satisfaction. Among these is the trumpet-shaped pink Duchess of Albany, the C Nelly Moser, a mauve with a deep reddish band, the C. Henry, a large white, the Jackmani superba, a violet purple much larger than the old Jackmani, and the wine-red Mme. Edouard Andre

All metals are crystalline, as are also building materials such as brick and even clay
