therefore readily be generalized to all brake maintenance workers.

How does the fact that it was limited in scope impact on your ability to read this as applying to brake maintenance workers across the board?

Can you tell the jury?

A The answer to that question would be that if I had this study alone, this would only be a suggestion, although a pretty impressive one when you are talking about a quarter of the employees having evidence of asbestosis.

It would take more studies to be more definitive and, as we know, there have been more studies generated since 1976, so that, in fact, we have that information now.

Q That was really the point that the authors of the study were trying to make with that sentence, correct?

A That is correct.

Q Okay. That sentence also says that the study was restricted to volunteers, and, therefore,
