Gentlemen:

Occasionally the necessity arises whereby our men are required to enter tank cars for the purpose of making repairs and cleaning the interior of the shell.

Just what precaution should be taken when it is necessary for our men to enter a car which last contained Ethyl Gasoline? We ask for this information inasmuch as some doubt exists as to the elimination of danger by cleaning the car, which is the present method used when ordinary gasoline was last shipped.

Yours very truly,

CHAMPLIN REFINING COMPANY
